COMPANY PROFILE

Our Story

Our founder, Aone Shantel Jali is a black South African youth female who travelled to school with school transport. She observed that private passenger transport is a lucrative business.

Yet, during Covid19 lockdown she realised the value of logistics companies when they were prepared to face a health risk in order to keep the globe ticking. This is how Zandla Zonyazi was conceived, with one purpose in mind, to support your business to deliver electrical equipment to your customers without any disappointments.

Zandla Zonyazi, a South African company that is 100% black, woman and youth owned operating nationally from Pretoria. Our name, Zandla Zonyazi loosely translated from isiZulu means 'hands of lightening'. It spells out our intentions clearly. To play a critical role of moving electrical equipment from locations where they are manufactured to locations where they are demanded while you focus on your core business. As we know, this allows businesses to trade with one another, which is necessary for the economy to grow. Zandla Zonyazi provides the essential service of linking your company to its suppliers and customers when we deliver your electrical equipment. We plan to be the beacon of light in the markets and communities that we operate in.
